Monthly Fund Fact Sheet as at 31 January 2026

Market commentary

Global share markets returned solid returns in January, despite ongoing geopolitical tensions and changing policy signals creating some short-term volatility. Markets were buoyed by robust economic data and strong earnings in the US that in general comfortably exceeded expectations.

Forward looking company guidance has also been healthy. In the all-important US market, investors rotated away from the technology sector especially software names, favouring select defensive sectors, small caps and metals. Energy was the best performing sector driven by increased demand, as severe winter weather hit the US, alongside the heightened geopolitical tensions.

By the end of the year the Reserve Bank of New Zealand had reduced the Official Cash Rate (OCR) to 2.25%, with economic activity remaining subdued. Heading into the February 2026 review, markets expect the Bank to hold the OCR steady. This is the first OCR review with the new RBNZ governor Anna Breman.
