

Market commentary

Share markets posted positive returns in August, helped by encouraging company earnings and resilient economic data. It wasn't all plain sailing however, with investors navigating periods of uncertainty as inflation remained slightly elevated and geopolitical tension in the Middle East escalated following additional US sanctions on Iran. The US share market led the way forward with investors focusing particular attention on the earnings reports of artificial intelligence related businesses. Many of these companies delivered results that met or exceeded expectations. Holdings in the technology and healthcare sectors positively contributed to performance over the month.
